

Why is participating in the Honors Alternative Spring Break trip considered an

"Honors Learning Experience?"

Engaging in an authentic service opportunity results in developing skills that are applicable to life—skills that cannot necessarily be discovered in a textbook.

The world can be considered a classroom, and service learning is an opportunity to discover and reach personal and professional goals.

The Honors Alternative Spring Break experience is also a leadership development experience; it provides opportunities for participants to observe different types of leadership styles, skills, and strategies, as well as to apply personal strengths and to discover untapped leadership potential.

Service, learning, and reflection can be done independently; however, when they are combined and developed over time through individual and team activities, the connections made and conversations shared can result in lasting, life-long change.

The Honors Program, its staff, our guest speakers, bus leader, trip leaders, and trip advisors challenge you to consider these

"transformational goals."